Neostoicism Wikipedia

Neostoicism recognizes four passions: greed, joy, fear and sorrow. Although the human has the free will, everything that happens (even if it is wrong because of the human) is under control of God and finally it tends to the good.

Blair Worden reviews Neostoicism and the Early Modern

The rest of Worden s criticisms of Neostoicism and the Early Modern State amount to little more than an elaboration of the fact that he found it a strange book and that he would have written it differently if he had written it himself. He doesn t even mention that half of Oestreich s book is largely about the constitutional development of the Holy Roman Empire and the German states in the 17th and 18th centuries, a subject about which there is very little literature in English.
